MAKING A DIFFERENCE

Looking for a job in Orange County where you can make a significant difference in the lives of adults with developmental disabilities? But also want a friendly and stable work environment?

Fortunately, you can find both at Costa Mesa-based nonprofit Project Independence (PI), which has more than four decades of service and stability as a lifeline for one of the county's most challenged populations.

“Working here, employees can offer support and independence training to adults with developmental disabilities, which is one of the most rewarding jobs you may ever find,”

--PROJECT INDEPENDENCE CEO ROBERT WATSON.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?

Prospective employees with a broad range of work experiences are welcome to apply, including from social services, education, and finance.

Seasoned professionals leaving retirement to put their experience to work at PI have found it rewarding, too.

Recent college graduates are also welcome to apply for entry-level positions and paid internships.

Part-time and full-time openings are available in:

- Independent Living
- Day Programs, and
- Supported Employment.

OUR MISSION

Project Independence's mission is to promote civil rights for people with developmental disabilities through services which expand independence and choice
